Scottish culture on display in Delhi

Artist Yuvan Bothisathuvar's Scottish influence gives Delhiites a chance to witness the culture of the artistically rich country

An ongoing exhibition in the Capital reflects the essence of Scottish culture that a Chennai-based artist, Yuvan Bothisathuvar, inspired during his stay in Scotland. Yuvan, who won the Emerging Artists of the Year award 2013, started his career as a signboard artist. About his first big exhibition, The Final Illusion, he says, "Life is like an illusion. You don't know if you exist or not." Building on these thoughts, his geometrical works aim to create an illusion, belying presumptions and defying expectations with sudden changes of contours and colours. Interestingly, Bothisathuvar has also used different materials like beads, thread, wood, mirrors and stainless steel to add different layers to the mystic of life. Bothisathuvar has used waste paper from recycled magazines and newspapers. In some pieces, the artist has also used poster art to blend nostalgia with art. According to the artist, the experience that he got abroad has given him a platform that he could have never imagined.
